Meaghan is a versatile circus artist and coach with a passion for choreography. She honed her skills in aerial hoop and contortion at L'Ecole Nationale de Cirque in Montreal, graduating in 2005.

Meaghan then embarked on a successful career as a principal dancer, performing worldwide in various productions including being featured as an aerial hoop performer and acrobatic dancer in Cirque du Soleil's 'Quidam.'

Transitioning to coaching and choreography, she obtained a coaching diploma in 2013, specializing in acrobatics research and hand to hand transitions.

Meaghan works as a private coach and choreographer, attracting students globally and manages the Aerial Arts global division with Acrobatic Arts.

She also runs The Academy Circus, a leading circus training facility in South-Western Ontario, with locations in London and Clinton.

With a wealth of experience, Meaghan has choreographed shows and worked on projects internationally, sharing her passion for the performing arts.

Meaghan created the Weggsphere, a visually appealing ground-based apparatus inspired by the aerial hoop. This meticulously crafted design combines functionality and aesthetics seamlessly.

Based in her hometown of London, Ontario, Canada, she now enjoys a settled life with her small family and is dedicated to welcoming aspiring performers into the industry, sharing invaluable tips and tools to help make their dreams a reality.
